JOHN EDMUND ACKERMAN

185 Main Ave., Passaic, N. J.

SON of John Henry Ackerman and Margaret Ellen Banta, was a farmer's son, from the Dutch stock that settled Northern New Jersey in Colonial times. His ancestors on both sides during the Revolution were compelled to provide for the Hessians and the English at the time of Washington's Retreat through Acquackanonk. Born at Slaughterdam, N. J., one of the "Damms" (as the Dutch song goes), now Garfield, September 4, 1857, he resided in the neighborhood of his birth and went to the little Red School House on the Passaic (then a cleaner river than now, we hope), and took his preparatory course at "Daddy" Waters' Preparatory School in Paterson, and a finishing year at the "Rat Trap", where he first became acquainted with many of 79's famous class, who were being whipped into shape for entrance to Rutgers by Prof. Alex. Johnston, afterward a noted Professor of History at Princeton College. "Jack," as he was dubbed by his classmates, took his share of college fun and study, and graced the stage at Junior "Ex" and Senior Commencement, graduating with A. B. and receiving the degree of A. M. in 1882. How he missed being a fraternity man, no one knows but "Jack," and he has never told. He studied law in the offices of Garret Ackerson, Hackensack, and William F. Gaston, Passaic, and was admitted to the Bar of New Jersey at the June term 1882. He married October 26, 1893, Willamina Grenlie, and has three children, Margaret Helen, David Greenlie, Rutgers 1917, and Janet Middleton, Vassar 1920. "Jack" is an all-around citizen, as his record shows as Examiner for Public Schools, Republican County Committee member, City Treasurer, and Custodian of School Moneys, President of Ackerman Realty Company, Secretary and Treasurer of Shade Tree Commission of City of Passaic. He is a churchman of note, sixteen years an Elder in the historic church of Acquackanonk at Passaic, a member of the Board of Education of the Reformed Church in America and now on its Executive Committee. "Jack" has rooted in his native soil and has proved the truth of Pope's lines—

Happy the man whose wish and care
A few paternal acres bound,
Content to breathe his native air
In his own ground.

WILLIAM CRAMER.

* April 4, 1899.

SON of Thomas Cramer, a Jeweller, and Cordelia Jones. Born at Poughkeepsie ('59 or '60). Prepared for College at one of Poughkeepsie's private schools kept by S. H. Bishop, and entered college with his boyhood chum Eddie Jewett in 1875. "Zip" was his college name, and his skill as pitcher was recognized by his classmates in Freshman year, and he held this position on the Class Nine during his college course. He was Captain of the Class Nine in Sophomore year; Director of the Targum Association; Delta Phi Fraternity. He became a member of the Second Reformed Church of Poughkeepsie in 1876, one of Dr. Joachim Elmendorf's "boys," a group of whom were in college at the same time. After graduation he studied medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City. After receiving his professional diploma, he practised in his native city, and his success as a physician was due entirely to his professional skill. A sentence in his biography in the local press at the time of his death on April 4, 1899, tells the story of Dr. Cramer's personality in a sentence. "He was not a man to push himself to the front, and the position he had attained in the community is a monument to his ability and to his devotion to his profession." Cramer never married. His devotion in the care of mother and sister probably kept him from marriage. As one of his pastors writes: "He was an able physician and was building a fine practice, when at thirty-nine he was called to Higher Service." Dr. William Bancroft Hill, who officiated at his funeral in 1899, writes nearly twenty years after, this beautiful summary of our classmate: "He was quiet, genial and kindly; he had many friends, and his death was much lamented."

Class of 1879

CLARENCE STEPHENS DAVISON.

Later attended Columbia Law School, and passed his examinations at General Term and was admitted to the New York Bar in February, 1883. In 1884 he was practising law in New York City.

JOHN FRELINGHUYSEN.

*August 14, 1894.

SON of Frederick Frelinghuysen, Lawyer, Surrogate of Somerset County, N. J., Secretary of the Somerset Bible Society, and Victoria Bowen Sherman. On paternal ancestry, he was a grandson of Gen. John Frelinghuysen, a grand-nephew of Theodore Frelinghuysen, who ran for Vice-President of the United States with Henry Clay, who was Chancellor of New York University from 1839 to 1850, and President of Rutgers College 1850 to 1862. On maternal ancestry he was a great-great-grandson of Colonel John Ely of Revolutionary fame. John or "Long John," as his classmates named him, was born at Raritan, Somerset County, New Jersey, Sept. 17, 1858. He attended the Public School at Raritan, entered Rutgers in June, 1875, and completed his course, receiving the degree of A. B. in 1879 and A. M. in 1882. After graduation he studied law in the office of his father in Somerville, New Jersey, and was admitted to the Bar in 1882. In 1884 he was appointed Special Pension Examiner, which position he held for two or three years, and then resumed the practice of his profession with Clark and Reed. With the hopes of improving his health, he went south in 1889 and became Superintendent for two years of the works of the Quitman Lumber Co. in southwestern Georgia. Upon his return he formed a law partnership with H. K. Gaston in Somerville, which partnership continued until his death at the early age of thirty-six years on August 14, 1894. John Frelinghuysen was one of those men of whom it could be truthfully said that he had not an enemy. Commanding presence, winsome personality, firm convictions of right and duty, and crowning all—a gentleman, he won the confidence and love of his associates in the legal profession and held the esteem of the community where he spent all his life. Although not a communicant member of the Reformed Church, he was a faithful attendant of its services, and lived the spirit of a Christian life, facing with courage and cheer his long sickness, and in God's out-door life found a strength and fellowship which never failed him. He succeeded his father in the Secretaryship of the Somerset Bible Society.

SEAMAN MILLER.

2 Rector Street, New York City.

SON of Amos Miller and Elizabeth Clum, was born at Clermont, Columbia County, New York, on May 11th, 1857. Resided at Linlithgo, Columbia County, until entering college. Prepared at Hudson Academy and was the heavy-weight member of the Class of '79. He took full part in college activities, literary and athletic. Was a member of Delta Upsilon Fraternity and Philoclean Literary Society, Valedictorian in 1879 and Master Orator 1882. Seaman Miller was admitted to the Bar of the State of New York two years after graduation, and has since that time practised as an attorney and counsellor of law in New York City. A case in which he appeared as attorney for the Church of the Holy Trinity of New York, and which the United States Supreme Court decided in favor of the Church, attracted universal attention and interest. The United States Government sought to have declared the proposition that the Church of the Holy Trinity violated the contract labor law in calling to this country as its Rector, the Reverend E. Walpole Warren, a distinguished divine of England. The federal statute was very broad in its terms prohibiting importation to perform labor or service of any kind, and while the United States Circuit Court sustained the contention of the Government, the Supreme Court, by unanimous decision, declared the Act inapplicable to clergymen, and established what has since been known as the Rule of Reason in the interpretation of statutes and the Constitution. Coincident with his general practice, Miller was Assistant United States District Attorney under the Cleveland administration, Assistant District Attorney of New York County under Col. John R. Fellows, and since the passage of the Bankruptcy Act in 1898, has been a Referee in Bankruptcy for the Southern District of New York. Married in New York City, Sept. 20, 1883, Edith Collyer.

JOHN H. SCARLET.

Newtonville, New York.

SON of James and Mary Scarlet, was born at Elizabeth, N. J., Dec. 24, 1852. His early years as an orphan were spent at Elizabeth and South Branch, New Jersey, where he prepared for college under private tuition by his Pastor, and entered college as a member of our class. He was one of a group of '79 men, students for the ministry, that lived at Hertzog Hall, who were by no means the "anaemic type" of theologues of literature, but the red-blooded type of the modern ministry. Those old walls on Seminary Hill could tell stories of frolics of fun after evening prayers, in which "Jack" was always present. He was a charter member of Alpha Rho Chi Psi, and was an orator at Commencement, and entered Phi Beta Kappa at graduation. He took his theological course at the Seminary in New Brunswick and was ordained by the Presbytery of New Brunswick as pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Ringoes, which he served from 1882-1886. He was pastor of Reformed Church of Feura Bush, Albany County, New York, 1892-1900. His marriage with Elizabeth Voorhees of South Branch, N. J., on October 25, 1882, was blest with two children, J. Ernest, born August 15, 1887, and Edna, born January 17, 1891, whose death in 1900 is the minor in the carol in "Jack's" life story. His life since 1900 has been spent on a small farm at Newtonville, near Albany, where impaired hearing prevents his return to his loved calling of the gospel ministry. Relatives among Rutgers Alumni: George W. Scarlet, '80, brother; Edward B. Voorhees, '81, brother-in-law.

Class of 1879

CORNELIUS SCHENCK.

904 West Front Street, Plainfield, N. J.

Classical Section

His mother's maiden name was Sarah Ruth Tracy.

"Zeke," as he is affectionately known by '79 men, was born at Arni, India, June 25, 1856, and remained there until the age of four years, when he was sent to America, to be brought up by his uncle, Dr. Joseph Scudder, at Passaic, New Jersey, and Upper Red Hook, New York, at both of which places Carman, as he was known to them, went to school in boyhood. From Upper Red Hook "Zeke" came to Rutgers College and matriculated with our famous class in June, 1875. He had his share of college honors, both in the Glee Club and Targum management. He was a member of the Peithessophian Literary Society. His fraternity was Delta Phi. Degrees conferred, A. B. 1879, A. M. 1882. Prepared for ministry at New Brunswick Theological Seminary, and licensed by the Classis of Hudson 1882. Ordained for missionary service in India, to which he went in 1882, remaining until 1900, when he returned to America and resided at Asbury Park with his father. In 1901 he became pastor at Wanaque, New Jersey, remaining there until he accepted an appointment to India as the Missionary of the Grove Reformed Church, whose Pastor, I. W. Gowen, was his classmate. As a Missionary he has made a record in organizing and administering Trade School work at Arni, India. He was the first missionary to use the bicycle in touring, and later devised a touring "unit" with gypsy wagon, specially constructed tents, and equipage, which is a model of convenience, comfort and efficiency. Married Minnie W. Pitcher, sister of Rev. Philip Pitcher, Rutgers 1882, and after six years of happy labors together, was called to part with her in 1888. In 1891, he married Mabel Tones at San Antonio, Texas, and after a few years, his wife became an invalid and ever since, with brave courage and sublime devotion, he has cared for her, while carrying on his missionary work with no whit less consecration and energy. Through all these years the beauty, strength, and manliness of his character have stood out in heroic proportions, impressive alike to both native and missionary observers. Relatives: All the Scudders in Rutgers' Alumni, 17 in all.

CLASSICAL NON-GRADUATES

WILLIAM JAMES BAILEY.

* March 13, 1878.

SON of Asa Bailey, Farmer, and Jane Kinney. Born at Cedar Hill, New York, 1856. Attended Public School at Cedar Hill in boyhood. Lived with his uncle, Rev. William Bailey, at White House, New Jersey, during preparatory course. Entered with Class of '79 as a student for the Gospel Ministry. Bailey was a big, good-natured, lovable fellow, a diligent student and an earnest Christian worker. In college and class prayer meetings and in the College Y. M. C. A., he was to be depended upon. During his college course he lived at Hertzog Hall, and was one of the group of '79 men who lodged there and had good times together with other '79 men from elsewhere to keep them company. The saddest day in our college course was March 13, 1878, in our Junior year, when, after a week's illness of typhoid, William J. Bailey passed into the Homeland. A delegation of classmates accompanied his body up the Hudson after the chapel services, at which the whole College assembled and President Campbell and Prof. Jacob Cooper made addresses. The ministry lost a noble and faithful pastor, and the Class of '79 its only member by death during our four years at Rutgers, yet we have kept his memory green at every re-union.

FRANK BRUEN CONOVER.

Tiffany Studios, 347-355 Madison Ave., New York City.

SON of Charles Haight Conover, Farmer, and also for 10 years County Judge of Monmouth County, New Jersey, and Marianna Bruen, daughter of Judge Cyrus Bruen and Eliza Anne Henderson. Conover, originally Couwenhoven, emigrated to America 1630, settled Rensselaer Wyck, now Albany, N. Y., third generation to Monmouth County, N. J., in 1701. Bruen, originally Le Brun, French Huguenot, escaped the massacre, settled in England, gave name to "Bruen-Stapeford," thence to America. All ancestors in Revolution—Grandfather, Thomas Henderson, Colonel of Continentals, distinguished at Battle of Monmouth, June 28, 1778. "Judge," as he was known in college days, spent his boyhood at Marlboro or Freehold, attending Marlboro Select School 1868-1872, and Freehold Institute 1872-1876, when he entered Class of '79 at beginning of Sophomore year. Spent '76, '77, '78 with class, but did not graduate. Manager of Baseball Nine one year. D. K. E. Fraternity. Has lived since at Freehold 1879-1893, Ausbury Park 1893-1908, New York City 1908-1916 in winter and Allenhurst, N. J., in summer. President of Seacoast National Bank, 1903 to 1908; Vice-Pres. of Tiffany Studios 1908-1916. Episcopalian. Democrat with mental reservations. Baseball the nearest sport, then Golf; and Auction Bridge for indoor preference. Twice married. Second marriage in 1914 to Lillian Post, daughter of Abram and Margaret Post, of Jersey City, N. J. Children: Dorothy Conover, born August 28, 1892; one child died in infancy.

CRAWFORD CROSBY.

* June 19, 1885.

SON of Edward Crosby, Dry Goods Merchant, and Caroline Crawford. Born at Kingston, Ulster County, New York, May 11, 1858. Prepared for college at Kingston Academy and Rutgers Grammar School. Entered Rutgers College in 1875 at the age of sixteen, a rosy-cheeked Freshman, popular with his classmates, who dubbed him "Pits," from some incident in his career long since forgotten. He continued with the class of '79 until well along in his Junior year, when he returned to Kingston and began the study of law with Hon. William Lounsberry. In 1881, after passing a brilliant examination at Saratoga, he was admitted to the Bar of New York, and opened an office at Kingston in the Crosby Building, Wall and John Streets, and continued so engaged until the time of his death. Fraternity D. K. E. Politics, Democrat. Attended Reformed Church. Crosby was a social and popular young man, possessed of many estimable traits of character, and was known throughout Ulster County, New York, as an excellent speaker, having given promise of oratorical ability in college, dividing with one of his classmates the prize in Sophomore year. His early death on June 19, 1885, closed a life which in boyhood gave great promise of a successful career.

Two sons were born of the union, one of whom was in Washington, D.C., recently, and the other is an officer in Manila, P. I. In 1881 he was Governor of a province in Japan. Under the peerage regulations promulgated by the Mikado in 1884, he was made viscount and was for a time an officer in the Department of Foreign Affairs. Especially interested in the advancement of education in his old province, he gave money in considerable sums for this purpose. He died in St. Louis, Mo., some years ago.

JONATHAN BRUEN MILLER.

* July 3, 1887.

MR. MILLER was born October 4th, 1858. He was the son of the late E. N. Miller of Newark, N. J., and had always lived in that city. He was always popular and had a large circle of intimate friends. Possessed of unusual talents, he was chiefly distinguished for his literary ability and his knowledge of mathematical subjects. As a mathematician, he was known as the inventor of a new curve, by means of which he formulated a rule for tri-secting an angle. His article on the subject, originally published in Van Nostrand's Magazine, has been incorporated in some of the latest mathematical text-books, and solves a problem which had long been considered impossible. Mr. Miller also invented a new method of multiplication and division, by which the ordinary processes may be shortened. Mr. Miller was at one time on the editorial staff of the New York Independent, and left there to become editor of the American Railroad Journal. Both positions he filled with marked success. Although during his last few years ill-health prevented his accepting any steady employment, he contributed articles from time to time to various publications. He died at Newton, N. J., where he had gone for the benefit of his health, on Sunday, July 3rd, 1887. He left a wife, the daughter of J. Lawrence Boggs, of Perth Amboy, N. J., two brothers and a sister.
